His response to his early critics in the press was to call them "Doberman pinschers trained to protect the government." "The media," he says, "would like to think that they can control the people, but I think the people, if they turn out for the movie, will show that they care. And they're not going to buy the official version."

Life
December 1991